Polly Sewell
Partner & Rural Surveyor
Rural Property & Business

“After graduating with a Masters degree in Rural Land & Business Management at the University of Reading I knew I wanted a career that meant I could stay living in a rural area but not be behind a desk every day. I therefore joined Robinson & Hall in September 2007 as a Graduate Surveyor working in the Rural Land & Business department.

“I liked the idea of working for a regional firm rather than one of the nationals as I believe you get a broader range of experience and closer contact with clients at an early stage.”

I took my Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS), Assessment of Professional Competence (APC) and my CAAV exams in 2009, whilst working at Robinson & Hall and found that my work experience really helped me pass both.

Due to my drive, determination and hard work I was promoted to Associate and then a few years later to Partner. Robinson & Hall are very good at acknowledging your achievements.

In addition to my day to day role I also assist and train all graduate surveyors, seeing them through the APC process and sharing my experience.

I chose Robinson & Hall because I grew up on the Cambridgeshire/Bedfordshire border and had links with the area. I also liked the idea of working for a regional firm rather than one of the nationals as I believe you get a broader range of experience and closer contact with clients at an early stage.

I also enjoy the benefits of having in house specialists in other fields of surveying so I can see a project through from start to finish.”

David Jones
Partner & Head of Agency
Farm & Land Sales, Auctions, Commercial and Residential Lettings

“I joined Robinson & Hall as a university graduate in 1987. The firm appealed to me as it had a very strong local reputation, with partners who were respected on the national stage. I was not disappointed and I learned much in the first few years from the senior partners at the time.

“The properties and the projects with which we deal with are all unique. Nothing stays the same for long.”

I soon specialised in planning and development work and in property sales, both areas which have grown considerably over the past two or three decades. I now deal largely in strategic planning opportunities and in the sales of farms and development land. I oversee the rapidly growing residential lettings and property auctions departments, where I wield my gavel at our collective sales every two months.

New legislation and changing market conditions provide opportunities and threats in equal measure. The properties and the projects with which we deal with are all unique. Nothing stays the same for long. All these things ensure that life is never dull.

However, the real reward comes in working very closely with our clients, to achieve their aims. Whether it is the advancement of development land over a ten year period, or the sale of surplus property, assisting the client to a successful conclusion brings the greatest satisfaction.”
